

Illumination

When light gives way to darkness, the sky is set alight with a thousand-coloured fire. Shadows lengthen and melt into the night. I treasure these moments that are caught between two worlds, when all seems to end in order to begin anew.

I created this lampshade to enfold the light as it has enfolded me; within its disappearing shroud.

Two cylindrical structures interlace one another in a play of vertical lines and wild curves.

Most difficult for me was to find balance between two structures of unequal form. Most rewarding was to engage in the play of shadows.

It is with pleasure that I present this pattern, which will allow you to experience creating this unique lampshade for yourself.

Advanced level booklets are aimed at artisans who have already mastered basic stained glass techniques. They do not include explanations of glass cutting, using the glass grinder or the application of copper foil.
